Monitor journalism changes lives because we open that too small box that most people think they live in we believe news can and should expand a sense of identity and possibility beyond narrow conventional expectations

Conclusion

For decades before it closed as a train depot in 1988 michigan central was the hub for nearly 4 000 passengers a day shuttling in and out of detroit the 18 story structure was and still is visible for miles after its closure a cloud of decrepitness took over with broken windows withered columns and prominent graffiti now its transformation matches the vibe and energy that detroit is experiencing the 30 acre site is being used to attract a mix of businesses focused on new technologies

Last month detroit marked the reopening of a long abandoned but iconic building michigan central station it did so with a concert that featured famous artists of the motor city diana ross eminem big sean jack white and the detroit symphony orchestra the event served as a reminder that the city once known for its creative contributions to american culture is becoming set to do something great again
